Police Believe Dead Man
Victim of Unfair
Play

BENTONVILLE, April 4.—(P)—The widow and two children of William Robert Pearman, of Columbia, Mo., found dead near Gravette last Saturday, today filed a civil suit for $200,000 damages in Circuit court here against Dr. Andrew J. Bass, aged 65, retired dentist and land dealer, of Columbia, Mo., who is charged with murder in connection with the slaying of Pearman in an insurance conspiracy.

Mrs. Maude Pearman and her two children Robert, 21, and Julie, 18, charged that Dr. Bass "added, noted, encouraged and aided some person who is unknown" to commit the crime about the death of Pearman. They charge that Bass robbed them of the comfort, support and the affection of their father and husband. Police believe was double crossed by Dr. Bass in a plot to collect four $50,000 insurance policies taken out by Pearman under the assumed name of William Folta, St. Louis land speculator, missing for 17 years.

On yesterday to the morgue at Gravette, a little town near here, Mrs. Pearman identified the body of a slain man as that of her husband who had been missing from his Columbia, Mo. home since March 21. She refused to confront Dr. Bass, who is charged with the murder of her husband.

BENTONVILLE, April 4.—(P)—Unique collection of hotel stickers, identified by Robert Pearman, aged 21, as similar to the stickers that he had obtained on a trip to various foreign countries last summer, was found by officers today in the suitcase belonging to Dr. Andrew J. Bass held on a murder charge in connection with the slaying of young Pearman, of Columbia, Mo., in an alleged insurance conspiracy plot.

Young Pearman told officers it was possible that another person could add that it was "very improbable" resemble an identical collection but Young Pearman said he kept the stickers in his room at Columbia, Mo., that he knew no way that anyone could obtain them except his father, who had access to his room.

The stickers were found by Sheriff Edgar Field in the suitcase of Dr. Bass which he brought here with him when he came to identify the body of a man who was found slain last Saturday as that of William Folta. The elder Pearman had taken out four $50,000 insurance policies which were assigned to Dr. Bass, a land dealer in Miller county, Arkansas.

Sid Taylor Runs As Road Overseer

Makes Formal Announcement for DeRoan Township

Sid Taylor, well known Hope citizen, formally announced his candidacy today for road overseer of DeRoan township.

Mr. Taylor was raised on a local farm and is known throughout the township. He has had several years experience on county roads, and has also been employed in state highway construction at times.

Mr. Taylor's formal statement declared: "From past experience I believe I know how to keep up public roads. I elected I promise to devote my entire time to road work, and guarantee that those who vote for me will never have cause to regret their choice."

Life of "Boes" Hard in Jonesboro

JONESBORO, Ark., April 4.—(P)—Life in Jonesboro for knights of the road isn't what it used to be. Mayor Bosler saw to that.

The mayor, interested in completion of city paving at a minimum expense to the taxpayers, ordered itinerant "boes" rounded up and put to work on the street gang. The first day's haul netted 15. At noon, Jonesboro was noticeable lacking in hoboes—the original 13 in particular.

Mayor Bosler was forced to capitulate. To six hoboes rounded up the following day he offered terms of working until noon with a dinner thrown in.

The mayor paid for five dinners out of his own pocket before enthusiastic hoboes went back to work.

Hirst and Brough Talk at Banquet

Former Governor Says Arkansas Business Better Than Neighboring States

Claude M. Hirst, state superintendent of education, and former Governor Charles H. Brough were speakers last night at the monthly banquet of Hope Retail Merchants association.

Stopping off in Hope on a school tour which brought them here from Malvern yesterday, and takes them to Murfreesboro today, the Little Rock men were invited to address the banquet in the club dining room of Hotel Barlow.

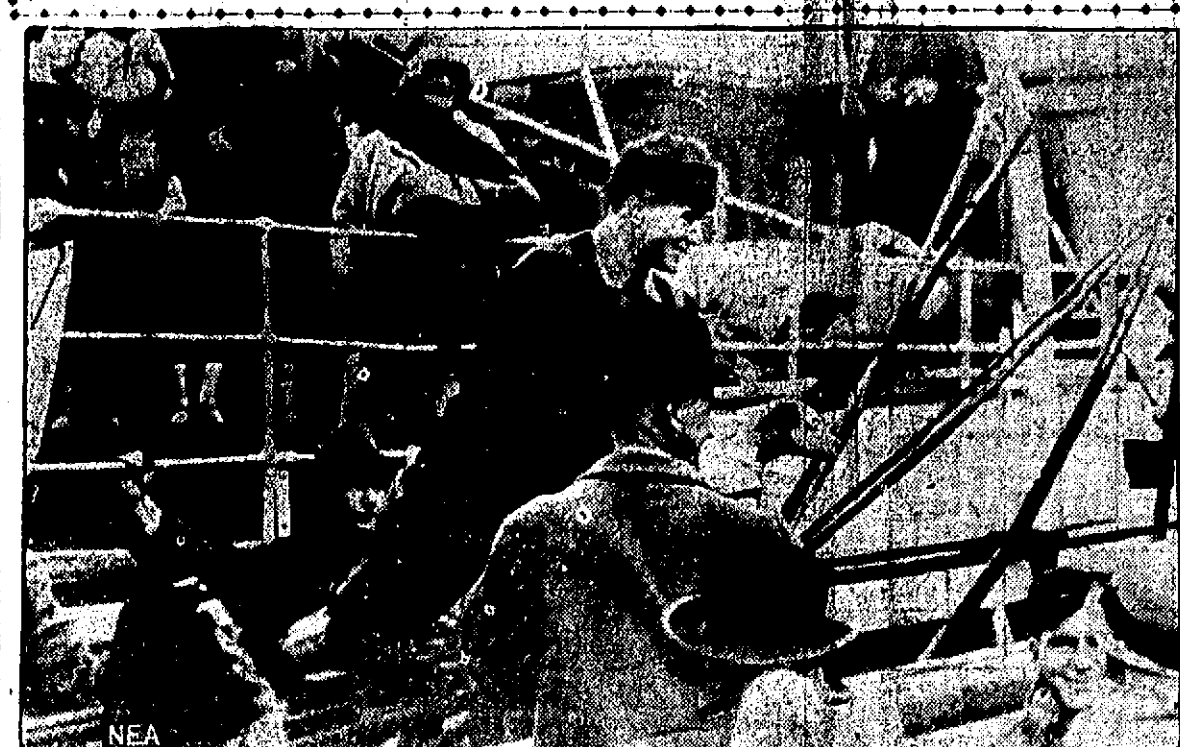

Dr. Brough, who has traveled extensively in Texas and Mississippi this spring, told his audience that Arkansas business is relatively much better than that in neighboring Southern states. He described a severe economic condition in Texas, and predicted a relatively prosperous summer and fall for all lines of Arkansas business, at a time when national business is slow.

Hirst talks on schools. Mr. Hirst, well known in this section as a former county superintendent of schools at Prescott, declared that what Arkansas needs today is less talk about how poor her public schools are, and more talk about how relatively good they are for a state that is largely agricultural. "We need good publicity in the North," he said, "and the progress already made in public education in Arkansas warrants us in advertising our state as a commonwealth which makes an honest effort to furnish free education to the common people."

Figures on school district consolidations all over the state, quoted by Dr. Brough and Mr. Hirst, showed that where Arkansas had 620 separate school districts when Dr. Brough was governor, during the World war this total had dropped to 420 when Mr. Hirst entered the state department, and today is only 280. "We are finding," Mr. Hirst said, "that the trade centers of the state can very profitably take in the rural schools for larger and better quality schools for both city and rural students, and at less expense for the taxpayer."

The principal speech at the Merchants association banquet was delivered by Dr. Don Smith, president of Hope School Board, who outlined the need of a new senior high school to take the place of the Garland building.

Naval Conference May Adjourn Soon

Only Three Power Pact
Quite Possible; Italy
Dissatisfied

LONDON, April 4.—(P)—Signing of a three-power pact between the United States, Great Britain and Japan, and a quick adjournment of the London naval conference was said to be quite possible today in authoritative headquarters.

This would mean the leaving of a knotty question of French security and the Franco-Italian parity open for other means of solution, but the pact would make a provision that France and Italy could sign as soon as their differences are ironed out.

The Italian delegation astounded the London conference today by issuing through their spokesman a statement that the Italian government was thoroughly dissatisfied with the present Anglo-Italian negotiations concerning France's demand for a security pact.

John J. Raskob Before Committee

Says He Did Not Mix Personal Opinion with That of the Association

WASHINGTON, April 4.—(P)—Called for questioning in regard to his stand against national prohibition, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National committee, testified before the senate lobby committee today, and asserted that he had "no right to commit the Democratic party on either side of the question."

After testifying that he had contributed between $65,000 and $66,000 to the association against the prohibition amendment of which he was director, he asserted that he was careful not to mix his personal opinion against the prohibition with that of the Democratic National committee.

The three men of the lobby committee present were: Senator Robinson, republican, Indiana, who asked Raskob to be called for questioning, Senator Caraway and Senator Walsh from Arkansas and Montana respectively and both democrats.

Raskob said much progress was being made toward the modification and the repeal of the 18th amendment. Under sharp questioning, Raskob said the Democratic party was not a lobbying organization, and that he was not sure just what definite terms they stood on about the prohibition question.

Ministers Seem to Run in This Family

PEA RIDGE, Ark., —(P)—Rev. A. E. Carnahan's resignation as pastor of the Presbyterian church here brought to a close 60 years of service in a ministerial capacity of members of the Carnahan family. Rev. Carnahan resigned after 14 years in the pulpit at the beginning of which time he succeeded his uncle, the late Rev. Peter Carnahan, who served the PEA Ridge church for 46 years. Rev. Carnahan was past the age limit for Presbyterian ministers, and now plans to spend the remainder of his life on a small farm near his old church.

Mr. Daggett and Mr. Oslin will appear in the convention program of the Eleventh district of Arkansas druggists, which meets at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Hotel Barlow.

Today's Rotary luncheon was presided over by E. P. McFaddin, club president. C. S. Lowthorp spoke briefly. George Brannan, Little Rock, and Earl Harrison, Malvern were out-of-town guests.

Everything in Readiness for Junior Class Play at City Hall

The scene is laid at the country home of Mrs. Perrington-Shine. The occasion is a house party at the wedding of Amy Lee and Brighton Early. Much trouble arises for the groom, for Billy Jackson, the heart-breaker, and for Professor Solomon Spigot, an authority on Egypt, which brings many humorous situations.

You can't afford to miss this production. You'll enjoy many a good laugh at Aunt Paradise, the colored cook, who knows that everyone is hoodooed, at Billy Jackson who proposes to three young ladies and is accepted by each, at Solomon Spigot, his wife and seven little Spigots.

Increase in Auto Deaths Reported

Toll Grows 12 Per Cent During Year, Says Commerce Dept.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—(P)—An increase of 12 per cent in the number of fatalities resulting from automobile accidents in 78 of the large cities in the United States during the year ending March 22, 1930, over the previous 12 months, was shown today in a mortality report issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

For the 52-week periods ending March 22, 1930, and March 24, 1929, the totals for the 78 cities were respectively 5,596 and 7,661, a recent rate of 26.1 per 100,000 population as against an earlier rate of 23.3, or a 12 per cent increase in the rate within one year.

Six cities reported no deaths from automobile accidents for the last four weeks while five cities reported no deaths for the corresponding period in 1929.

For the last four-week period in the 78 reporting cities, the total number of deaths from automobile accidents was 576, of which only 486 resulted from accidents actually within city limits.

The number of automobile accident fatalities in the month ending March 22, 1930, showed an increase of 53 deaths as compared with the corresponding period last year when only 523 deaths were reported.

The report showed that of all four-week periods since May 1925, the lowest total appeared for the month ending March 22, 1922, with 346 deaths. The highest mortality figures, 840, for a four-week period were reported for the month ending Nov. 2, 1929.

Robbers Stage Daylight Hold Up

Escape with Large Loot; Machine Gun Brought Into Bank

DAYTON, April 4.—(P)—Five robbers, masked and armed with a machine gun, held up five employees of the Xenia avenue branch of the Union Trust company and several customers today, looted the bank vault of practically all its cash and escaped with a sum estimated to be between $30,000 and $40,000.

Two of the robbers remained in an automobile in front of the building while the other three entered and forced bank employees and customers to lie down on the floor. One of the robbers brought the machine gun inside the bank while his two companions held the employees at bay.

Seizing up all available cash and what was on the counters, the robbers escaped in their waiting machine.

The robbery this morning was the fourth staged there in the past several years. The haul today is probably the largest made on the bank in all the hold-ups previous to this time. The other sums ranged from $5,000 to $15,000.

Ford Roadster is Demolished When Driver Hits Ditch

Two Members of Morgan Show in Critical Condition

PINNED UNDER CAR

Both Suffered Injured Backs and One Receives Caved Chest

Al Standard, aged about 23, and Chester Lewis, aged 23, members of the J. Doug Morgan show, which is playing in Hope this week are in a local hospital in a very serious condition as the result of an automobile wreck shortly after noon today.

It was reported that the two men were driving toward Lewisville at about 1:30 o'clock today in Standard's sport model Ford roadster. When about four miles from Hope, Standard lost control of his machine and overturned into a ditch. The automobile apparently crushed the two men when overturning.

Standard, owner of the car, received a crushed chest and suffered a deep gash about the hip. Reports from the hospital said Lewis seemed to be paralyzed from the hips down as a result of a back injury, which may be a broken spinal cord.

The Hope Furniture company, responded to an ambulance call, reported that the two men were lying on the front porch of a house nearby after being carried from the wreck by a passing motorist. They were rushed to the Julia Chester hospital where they received medical aid.

Standard was a director in the orchestra, played the violin and banjo and was also the leading man in the Morgan stage production. Lewis, who seems to be in the worst condition, was a piano player for the show. The automobile was demolished.

Race Horses Are Burned to Death

Heroism Is Shown By Three Stable Boys When Fire Rages

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—(P)—Four race horses perished in a fire that last night swept through a barn at Jefferson park race track, and after an investigation revealed that Jimmie "Red" Mulligan, exercise boy for Jack Bishop, who was at first believed burned to death in the fire, was not in the blaze, but had left New Orleans.

Six horses were saved by heroic efforts of the attendants at the stables. Heroism was shown by Howard Bayer, 16-year-old boy who is credited with saving two horses at the risk of his own life, and by H. W. Jones, a negro stable boy who saved four horses, and today were the subjects of post fire conversations.

Bayer when about to retire last night discovered fire in the barn where he dashed in and out and saved two horses from burning to death. He rescued two more horses, while the negro stable boy and H. W. Jones were trotting out two more "bab" tails.

The four horses that were burned to death were valued at $4,000.

Expect Ward Sale to Boost Trade

Hope Store Confident Crowds Will Visit City Next Week

Hundreds of out-of-town shoppers coming to the city during the week of April 5 to 12, attracted by the announcement of the Ward Week sale, will prove the greatest stimulus to local industry of all kinds that has been known during the current year, the prediction made today by A. S. Sheffer, manager of the retail store of Montgomery Ward & Co.

According to his experience in other cities, every enterprising merchant in the city will profit by the coming of the crowds, which will throng the city during the Ward Week sale, Manager Sheffer said today.

The local store considers itself essentially a local organization, a cog in the wheel of local industry wherever it may have its branches. This April sale is launched in the hope of stimulating a general widespread interest in the business enterprise of our entire community.

Many of the shoppers we expect to visit our city during the week of the sales are people who have never been here before. They come with the buying interest, uppermost in their minds and represent a great opportunity to wide-awake business men of the community. Such a group of visitors as we will have circulating through our city during the week of April 5 to 12 will go far in increasing the good will of this community throughout the county.

Business men here are already making preparations to take care of the hundreds of visitors, and it is the hope of the retail store of Montgomery Ward & Co. that the Ward Week sale will be the occasion of the inauguration of a new season of prosperity for every merchant in the city and for the community as a whole.

"GOOD TO TAKE IN THE SPRING"

Black Draught Is A Cleansing Medicine That Should Help You As It Did This Lady.

Oklahoma City, Okla. "The first of the week I was feeling bad, was dizzy and felt bilious," writes Mrs. L. P. Moyer, of 408 North Lee Street, this city.

"I took a dose of Theodor's Black Draught every night for three nights, and now I am feeling fine. It can always tell when one of these attacks is coming on. I can't see good and everything dances in front of me. As soon as I begin to feel like this I take Black Draught, for it always helps me. All this trouble seems to come from constipation.

"My father had used Black Draught in his home and often told me I ought to try it, but up until two years ago I had not. Then I began taking it for constipation and indigestion. I found it to be the best home medicine I had ever used. I take it as often as I need anything for constipation. I feel fresh and have more pep after I have taken a course of Black Draught. It is a good medicine to take in the spring of the year."

Costs only 1 cent a dose.

There are lots of fine fruit trees yet in the patches in this vicinity. It seems that a reasonable price should be had for them since the recent cold weather in the north.

We are in receipt of a letter of recent date from Mrs. Chas. Alexander of Vinton, Ark., who states that nearly all fruit and many other trees and shrubs have been frozen during the past winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Ruggles and family of El Dorado spent the week end with relatives here.

April fools day passed over very quietly as everyone was too busy to pass jokes.

Mrs. Velma Ward of Prescott was calling on relatives here last Friday evening.

Cooking School Note

In the cooking school conducted under the auspices of the Hope Star, Mrs. Leona Rusk Threlk, stresses modern methods of cooking. Naturally, then, she uses and recommends CRISCO, the modern shortening.

Fruit trees 250 years old—and a recipe that grew up with them

THERE are fruit trees that old, right in the quaint little old village of Middletown, N. J., where the woman lives who sent me this excellent Crisco recipe for Dutch apple cake.

She told me, too, that the thrifty settlers used to mark their boundary lines with fruit trees, mostly apple, instead of fences. And the wives had to devise all manner of ways to use these apples so the husbands wouldn't turn them all into hard cider. This cake was one of their recipes.

I don't know how good the original apple cake was, but it couldn't have been any better than the modern version of it, made with the modern shortening—Crisco—whose delicate flavor allows every little piece of apple to assert itself in the finished deliciousness of the cake. This recipe is simple and quick like all Crisco recipes.

No matter what kind of food I'm cooking, if the recipe calls for a shortening or a fat, I use Crisco—for I sort of grew up on it. It's been in my mother's kitchen for 18 years. We've both always found it sweet and fresh-tasting just as it came from the can. Crisco stays good-tasting, too. And so do foods cooked with it.

DUTCH APPLE CAKE

1 cup flour 1/2 cup milk
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder 4 apples
2 tablespoons sugar 1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons Crisco 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 egg yolks (save whites for sauce) rind

Mix and sift together flour, baking powder, 2 tablespoons of the sugar and salt. Cut in Crisco and add egg yolks mixed with milk. Mix. Pour into shallow Criscoed cake pan and top with apples which have been cut into wedge-shaped slices. Sprinkle top with rest of sugar, and the cinnamon and lemon rind and dot with bits of Crisco. Bake in hot oven (350° F.) about 35 minutes or until apples are tender. Serve hot or cold with lemon sauce.

Fluffy Lemon Sauce

Mix one egg, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Add water and cook in double boiler about 5 minutes or until thick, stirring constantly. Then mix in 1 tablespoon Crisco, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg and lastly fold in 2 egg whites beaten stiff. This sauce may be served with almost any dessert similar to the Apple Cake.

ALL MEASUREMENTS LEVEL. Recipes tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Crisco is the registered trade-mark of a shortening manufactured by The Procter & Gamble Co.

Taste Crisco—then any other shortening. Crisco's sweet, fresh flavor will tell you why things made with Crisco taste so much better.

CAN'T is the worst word that's written or spoken; doing more harm here than slander and lies.

On it is many a strong spirit broken, and with it many a good purpose dies. It springs from the lips of the thoughtless each morning.

And robs of courage we need through the day; it rings in our ears like a timely sent warning.

And laughs when we falter and fall by the way.

Hate, it with hatred that's deep and undying. For once it is welcomed 'twill break any man.

Whatever the goal you are seeking keep trying. And answer this demon by saying "I can."

Mrs. Ruffin White entertained at a most beautifully appointed five course turkey dinner last evening at her hospitable country home, as special compliment to Miss Elizabeth White, who has recently recovered from a very severe illness. The dining table was perfectly appointed and was a symphony of orchid and pink and silver, centered with a basket of lovely lilies, and pink silhouette tapers gleamed in silver holders. The place favors also emphasized the chosen color note of orchid and pink. Covers were laid for Misses Elizabeth White, Miriam Carlton, Elizabeth Arnett and Messrs. Charles Rounton, Thos. The Pat Cleburn chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy held their regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Haynes on West Second street with Mesdames Gus Haynes, M. White, at which time it was voted to put on a contest for new members, naming Mrs. Fannie Garrett and Mrs. Basil Newton as captains. It was also decided at this time to hold the next meeting the first Thursday in May at the old capitol building in Washington. Mrs. John S. Gibson, Sr. presented the following interesting program. Miss Beryl Henry gave a catechism of the south followed by a round table discussion. Reading, "Red Riding Hood" by Miss Genevieve Higginson. Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp gave some very interesting facts pertaining to her work as state historian and Mrs. W. O. Shipley read two original poems, entitled, "Service" and "The Grand Old South." Following the program delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

U. S. Take Over Giant Task of Harnessing Mississippi River Through Jadwin Plan

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 2.—"Old man Ribber, he don't plant corn and he don't plant cotton; and them that do on soon forgotten."

To most of the world those words are just a part of the hit song from Edna Ferber's "Show Boat," but residents of the Mississippi Valley know them to be true.

Thousands of persons who till the fertile soil bordering the Mississippi River have seen the muddy flood waters sweep their crops away time and again often wiping out the work of a lifetime.

It is no unfamiliar sight in the Valley to see farmers load their scanty belongings into a wagon, drawn by a team of mules, and while the women and children trudge along, drive to higher ground.

Weeks later they return, often penniless, to the watersoaked waste that once was a broad expanse of beautiful, growing crops and substantial homes. Little is left then but hope.

For countless years flood waters annually have swept over this vast agricultural area now inhabited by 4,000,000 people. Three times in modern history—in 1884, 1912 and 1927—floods have resulted in major national disasters.

The most serious was in 1927, when 240 persons were drowned and nearly 1,000,000 made homeless by flood waters invading 170 counties in seven states. The Red Cross spent $17,498,902 in relief work to care for 637,476 persons.

Earthen embankments built back from the river after many years of work and expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars are virtually all that stand between a 1,000,000 people and possible annihilation.

Floods aren't new to the Mississippi Valley. The first record ever written of a disaster on the North American continent describes a flood in the Mississippi Valley.

In an account of the adventurous explorations of Fernando De Soto through the Valley in Arkansas in 1543, it is recorded that, "God, our Lord, hindered the work with a mighty flood, which at that time, about the 10th of March, began to come down with an enormous increase of water."

The narrator describes that it took 40 days for the water to reach its peak and added, "it was a beautiful thing to look upon, the sea where once had been fields. Those who have seen floods since know it to be one of the most terrifying of sights."

"On each side of the river, the water extended over 200 leagues of land, and all of their areas was navigated by canoes, nothing being seen but the tops of the tallest trees."

Since the first American farmers came west a battle has been waged against the river for possession of these millions of acres of fertile farm land. Closer and closer to the river the soil has been tilled and higher and higher the levees have been built.

Hope's Traveling Men

THE proposal by the Rev. W. A. Bowen for the business men of Hope to entertain the traveling salesman who make this city their home but are seldom in contact with its community life, is the finest civic suggestion in many months.

It has been adopted by Hope Chamber of Commerce, and the April Loyalty Banquet which is staged quarterly by the Chamber and the civic clubs, will be given over to a "Peddlers' Jubilee."

We have heard from several of the traveling men that there are close to ninety sales representatives permanently stationed in this city. They leave Hope on Monday and are gone until Friday night. They travel west into Oklahoma, far up into Arkansas, and south into Louisiana. They belong to our city in fact, but perhaps not in spirit. If our faith in our city is not their faith, if wherever they go they fail to spread the word that Hope is a good place in which to live, a good place to do business in, then Hope has short-changed these men who should belong to her.

The traveling salesman holds an unparalleled record for constructive enterprise in American business. For two generations he has been the key-man in all the vast industrial and merchandising development that has made this a mighty nation and a better country in which to live.

If you happen to read Jesse Rutherford's Sprague's splendid fact novel, "On the Road," in the Saturday Evening Post last year, you caught the vision of what the energetic traveling man has meant to America. If you haven't read it, buy the book today. It's an absorbing story of a student of human nature—a real salesman, one who could take diamonds, hardware and electrical appliances, and find the market that the manufacturer was seeking. Somewhere in his novel, Mr. Sprague says that he has read all kinds of stories about men who have risen from office-boy to general manager, but never about the man who was a good salesman from beginning to end. So his novel is that story, and it is fascinating as only a story about business can be.

What the salesman has been in the scheme of national business, he can be to his home city in proportionate degree. Better business clusters around the place where good business already is. It is worth dollars and cents to Hope to have its good reputation made better. That's why we spend so much energy every year on the Watermelon Festival, the Southwest Arkansas Fair, and many other projects. But our traveling Salesmen are every-day ambassadors whom the city overlooks five days out of the week.

Hope has no chapter of the United Commercial Travelers, but this month's "Peddlers' Jubilee" may be the beginning of a permanent organization which will bring local traveling men closer to our city and each other.

Missouri's Prison Riot

AS PROOF of its contention that the riot in the Missouri penitentiary resulted from prisoners' dissatisfaction with overcrowded conditions, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch publishes a statement from the 1929 Handbook of the National Society of Penal Information. One paragraph of that statement is especially significant. It says:

"With conditions of overcrowding such as obtained in this institution, it is probably not possible to build up a high morale, but little dependence here seems to be placed on morale and an unjustifiable amount of faith in the use of punishment cells of a type which would not be tolerated in most prisons today."

In the same issue of the Post-Dispatch, Warden Leslie Rudolph is quoted as saying: "We have tried to treat all the men in this prison right, but some of them apparently don't appreciate that kind of treatment. For several years reformers criticized the prison for disciplinary methods and this probably was the cause for some changes. From now on we are going to have a real prison."

Here are the two conflicting views which have clashed for many years and will continue to clash for many more. You can take your choice as to the cause of the Missouri riot.—Arkansas Democrat.

Mark Twain spoke more than humor when he said: "When in doubt, speak the truth." Yes, always speak the truth. Even the devil hates a liar. Nature itself closes its eyes in shame when the liar passes by. There is no excuse for a liar, and the liar has no respect even for himself.—West Point (Miss.) Times-Leader.

220 Miles of Eggs

New York City eats over seven million eggs a day. Place them end to end and you would have a row of eggs 220 miles long. One hundred million dollars is a conservative estimate of what this one city pays for poultry and eggs in a year.

And yet, of the 42 carloads of poultry unloaded in New York City during the week ending October 30th, only one car showed up from the South, and it was from Oklahoma. And this is a typical example. California and the middle west are not only supplying New York, but they are also SHIPPING MANY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS WORTH OF POULTRY PRODUCTS INTO THE SOUTH.

Arkansas is the ideal section for poultry raising. Soil and climate conditions are more suitable, and no matter how rapid the progress, it will be a long time before the South raises enough poultry to supply home markets. New Orleans alone consumes over six million dollars worth of poultry products a year—half of the present output of Louisiana.

There is plenty of room and abundant opportunity in Arkansas for poultry raising. Every Hempstead county farmer can profitably keep from 100 to 500 chickens. One hundred good intelligent farmers in this county, keeping 500 hens each, will have a carload of eggs to sell every week.

Most all poultry products come from farms where poultry is one of several side-lines that insure a steady, year round income, regardless of how major crops turn out. J. E. Hoyle, of Burke County, North Carolina, made a profit of $600.00 last year from his flock of 450 hens.

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer
At the end of winter nearly everyone experiences a loss of appetite. During the cold months, the body has craved foods that would supply heat and consequently a diet rich in fats and carbohydrates has been maintained. Even if fruits and vegetables have been included in the family diet, the tendency is to over-eat of the richer foods that eventually clog the system. This condition causes that tired feeling so often called "spring fever."

Too little iron in blood and tissues causes them to misbehave. The external indications of this internal "misbehavior" are apparent in poor color, listlessness and lack of vigor. Physiologists tell us that iron in the blood is the carrier of oxygen to the tissues where food materials are burned to release energy. A shortage of iron cheats the tissues of their oxygen so that they cannot completely burn the food supplied to them.

Include Iron in Menu
Unless menus are carefully planned, there will not be sufficient iron to insure vigor and endurance. Although meat is one of the richest sources of iron, it is not one of the best foods for the body to assimilate and dispose of, and a high meat diet is not wise. Fruits and vegetables must be used upon to furnish the necessary iron grams and keep the body "fit." Bulky foods that will give the digestive tract its much needed exercise are essential. Nearly all fruits and vegetables are mineral-rich foods and have a decidedly tonic-like effect. Some are richer in iron than others and some vegetables lose more iron during the process of cooking. When fruits and vegetables are eaten raw, they suffer no loss of iron and full benefit is obtained from them. When Foods Retain Iron Keep in mind that the amount of water used and the size of the pieces of vegetables greatly affect the loss of iron in cooking. Cooked in large pieces and in a little water as possible, vegetables retain more iron than when they are cooked in a large amount of water and cut in small pieces. A partial list of iron-rich foods may be convenient to have at hand when planning menus: Lean beef, liver, oysters, egg yolks, cabbage, dried beans, chard, string beans, potatoes, lettuce, peas, carrots, asparagus, radishes, raisins, prunes, dates, figs, beets, whole cereals, pineapple. Although one glass of milk does not contain much iron, a quart of it becomes very much worth while as a source of this element. Molasses is a much richer source of iron than sugar.

Tale of David Harum
Predicting a pennant for a team that finished a very bad last few years ago would be a hazardous guess. I mean the Philadelphia Nationals. I wouldn't be ready to say the team is going to win a pennant this year. The pitchers haven't shown enough. But in neither league is there a ball team that has changed so remarkably since 1928 as the once lowly Phils.

Manager Burt Shotton has poured himself a lot of uniforms full of powerful youth. And in doing so he has proved himself another David Harum, one of the shrewdest traders in baseball. I asked him over at Winter Haven, Fla., the other day what he regarded as the best trade he ever made.

Cardinal Deal Biggest

"Well," said Burt, "I don't think there is any question about that. When I gave Jimmy Wilson to the Cardinals for Hurst, Peel, Thevenow and Speedy Davis, I made what you might call a trade. When I took charge of the team there was Wrightstone at first base, Thompson at second, Sand at short and Friberg at third. The outfielders were Moken, Nixon, Leach and Williams. For pitchers I had Scott, Sweetland, Willoughby, Ulrich and Walsh. The catchers were Jannard and Wilson.

I sold Scott to Toledo and Nixon to Portland. I gave the Cardinals Jannard and Moken for catcher Johnny Shulte and pitcher Jimmy Ring.

Then I traded Wilson to the Cards for Hurst, a first baseman, Homer Peel, an outfielder, Speedy Davis, a catcher, and Tommy Thevenow, a grand little shortstop.

I recalled outfielder Southern from New Haven, and bought pitcher Elliott from the Cardinals. I got Whitney from New Orleans and pitcher Bengie from Waco. They came in the draft.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

OWEN JOSEPH BUSH, White Sox manager, got the nickname Donie from a screwball of that name which Pat Flaherty used to pitch for Pittsburgh many years ago. Bush acquired the name while he still was a rookie with Detroit. "Pat struck me out with his 'donie' the first time I batted against him," Bush explained. "I was the subject of much kidding for several days and before I knew it, the boys were calling me Donie. They still do it." Flaherty, now a scout for the Cubs, was a southpaw who frequently caught batsmen, and sometimes his own catcher, off their guards by a quick delivery after the ball had been returned to him following an ordinary pitch.

Gave Leach for O'Doul

"I TRADED Leach to McGraw for Lefty O'Doul, and O'Doul came through for me. We paid $7500 for Klein and some day he'll be a better hitter than Babe Herman."

"This year I traded Homer Peel back to the Cardinals for Grover Alexander. A lot of people thought I was silly to make an Old Aleck who is 42 years old and just won't behave. But Aleck is a wonderful teacher. Besides I've got to balance the club up a little bit. Too many young fellows isn't so good either. Aleck will win games for us this year, and don't forget that."

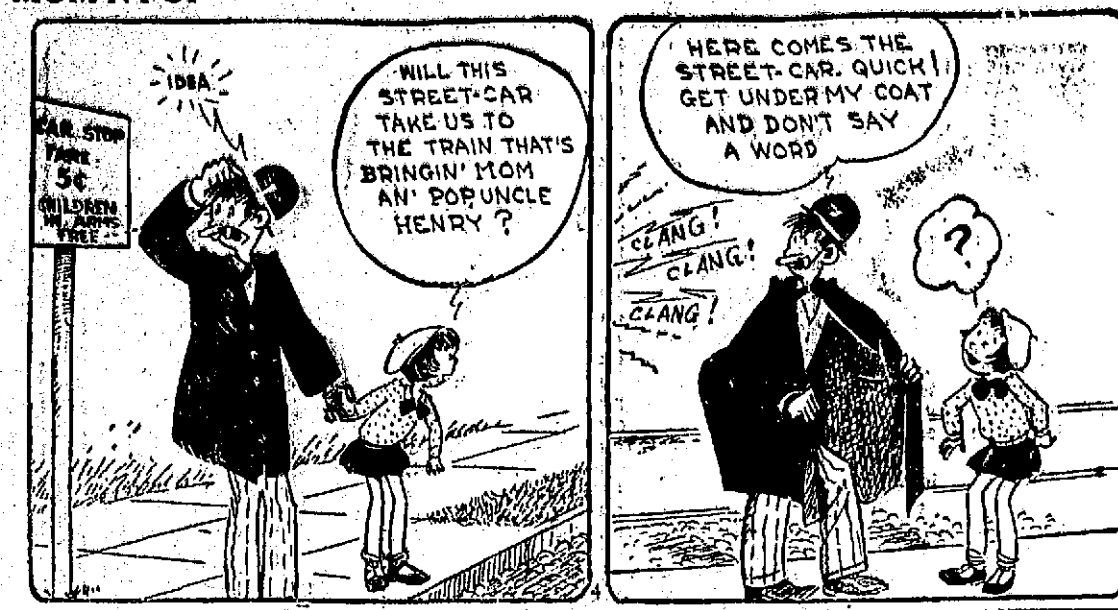

"The only fellows I've got left from the team that were called the Phils three years ago are Willoughby, Sweetland, Friberg, Thompson, and Williams. It's a new team, with new life. Look at what those batters did to the pitchers last year."

"We're going into the first division this year and give the lead-ers a lot of fun for their money. This is a ball team now!"

Arkansas University In Dual Track Meet With Ouachita College Saturday

ARKADELPHIA, April 3.—The intercollegiate event of Arkansas the coming week is the dual track and field meet at Fayetteville between the University of Arkansas and Ouachita College.

This, the first track meet between the two institutions, will come on Saturday afternoon and from indication the University boys will have very stiff competition all through the 16 events with the exception of the pole vault and high jump in which Ouachita's men are amiss.

Ouachita this season finds that it has an unusual crop of sprinters, no less than 10 boys being able to make good time in the 100, 220, 440 and 880 runs and the three relays. Some of the Tiger speeders are Rankin, Ed Hopkins, Rountree, Baine, Hallett, Baxter, Adams, Thomas, Jones and Palmer.

The Tigers also are well equipped in running broad jump men, javelin shot and discus tossers. The hurdlers will push the best that the university has but Ouachita will not show many men of ability in the mile and the two mile, if the latter is run. Queen, Baine and Rountree are good in the half and mile events.

The meet at Fayetteville should be a good stiff workout for the Razor-back thinclads and will be of value to the Tigers who are soon to meet College of Ozarks, Arkansas State Teachers College and Hendrix in dual meets and later to compete in the state meet at Clarksville where they will make their supreme effort to win the championship. Coaches Hammons and Braslier are putting a lot into their work with the squad and nothing short of a successful season is expected.

by ANNE AUSTIN

AUTHOR OF "THE AVENGING PARROT" "THE BLACK PIGEON, ETC."

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DORIS MATTHEWS, a blonde, is murdered in a summer house, under a heavy perfume flask given her by Seymour Crosby, who is known as the "Black Pigeon" of the underworld. Her body is found in the back of a truck, and the case is a mystery.

other cent. Come home," he reminded her.
"If she had asked his permission to come home, I fall to see why he did not wait for her in New York," Mrs. Lambert pointed out.

"Possibly he wanted to deal personally with the man who had made her so unhappy," Dundee suggested. Then, as Mrs. Lambert expressed her scorn only with her blazing eyes: "Will you tell me whether to your knowledge Mrs. Crosby was jealous, or had cause to be jealous of any other woman?"

"No! I can swear that such a thought never entered Phyllis's head!"

DUNDEE was silent for a while, his eyes narrowed in thought. Then: "Did you see Doris after the inquest, Mrs. Lambert?"

"No, not until she came to see me upon my return to New York," she answered. "Her mistress's death was a terrible blow to Doris, and after the strain of the inquest she collapsed. The papers said that she went to the home of an aunt in a London suburb. I made a note of the aunt's name, and address and sent flowers and delicacies to her there, but did not go to see her, since I myself was suffering from the strain and from relief. I went to a little village in the south of France and remained there in seclusion, until I sailed for America early in August."

"Did you see Mr. Crosby during that time?"

"No, but I had several letters from him. He was traveling over the Continent, making a brave effort to conquer his despair. For several months I feared he would follow Phyllis, and in my own letters to him, I said everything I could to make him happier."

"And yet, just 16 months after his wife's death, Seymour Crosby becomes engaged to be married to another girl," Dundee reminded her.

"No fair!" Gigi protested, making a face at the detective and burrowing deeper into Mrs. Lambert's embrace. "I've always heard that widowers who were crazy about their wives get married again quick."

Mrs. Lambert smiled, dropped a grateful kiss upon the tumbled brown curls then explained to Dundee:

"It was I who introduced him to Phyllis, and I who encouraged him to try to find solace in a new life with a girl whom I esteemed highly. When I wrote Seymour that I was returning to America, he replied that he too was homesick, and would join me on the Mauretania. On shipboard I became acquainted with Mrs. Berkeley and her daughter, and introduced them to Mr. Crosby. Seymour and Phyllis were obviously congenial from the first, though I should not say that either was tempestuously in love. Mrs. Berkeley encouraged the attraction."

"I bet she did!" Gigi giggled. Again Mrs. Lambert smiled, an expression which made her look almost like a girl again, and very beautiful. "When it became fairly obvious that an engagement would result, Mrs. Berkeley begged me to accept the post of social secretary. I had never worked for money in my life, and the prospect dismayed me, but—she hesitated, then flung up her silver-crowned head defiantly. "The small remnant of my dead husband's estate was almost completely exhausted, and it was necessary for me to earn money in some way."

"Why didn't you get married again yourself, Tish?" Gigi began eagerly. "You're so beautiful and such a amb I should think every plutocrat that looked at you—"

Mrs. Lambert's delicate cheeks flamed, and she stopped the rush of words by laying a hand over the child's mouth. "I accepted the position and Mrs. Berkeley asked me to begin my duties by engaging a butler and a thoroughly competent lady's maid for herself and Phyllis. I had a letter from Wickert while I was still in France, telling me that he was returning to America, and saying that he wanted to serve me. If I should again set up an establishment, on my arrival in New York I located Wickert through an employment bureau and offered him his post, which he accepted. A day or so later he sent Doris to me. She was employed on a Long Island estate, but wished to be with Wickert again."

"She simply adored you!" Gigi cut in.

"And I loved Doris," Mrs. Lambert said quietly, for the second time during the interview. "I think that is all I can tell you, Mr. Dundee. As you probably know, Phyllis and Mr. Crosby became engaged on the last day of the voyage."

Dundee was silent again for a long minute. Then he asked abruptly: "Mrs. Lambert, was it from you that Doris expected to borrow sufficient money to set up a luxury shop of her own?"

"From me?" Mrs. Lambert was obviously surprised. "That is absurd. Doris knew quite well that I have nothing now except my salary as Mrs. Berkeley's secretary."

"Do you know whom she had in mind as her benefactor?" Dundee pressed.

"Why, no! I haven't the least idea."

"Forgive what must seem like unwarranted prying, Mrs. Lambert," Dundee went on, "but last night I happened to overhear Mrs. Berkeley say to you, 'All right, I promise. Will you tell me, please, what promise you extracted from Mrs. Berkeley?'"

"Really, Mr. Dundee, I must refuse to answer that question," Mrs. Lambert retorted icily. "It was a purely personal matter, having nothing at all to do with—the tragedy you are investigating."

DUNDEE shrugged slightly, then smiled at her disarmingly as he took a rather crumpled package of cigars and a patent lighter from his coat pocket. He was snapping unsuccessfully at the flint when Gigi scrambled out of Mrs. Lambert's lap and snatched the lighter from his hands.

"But it needs filling!" she told him. "Let me do it! See this funny little fountain!" and she ran around the big desk to where an ornamental little keg with gleaming brass bands held a prominent position among writing accessories. "It's a filling station for starving lighters, but we feed 'em wood alcohol instead of gas. Watch!" and she jerked the lighter apart, then held the tiny reservoir directly under the miniature spigot whose tap she turned. "Now see if it will light."

Dundee accepted the refilled lighter with thanks, then remarked admiringly: "That's neat! I never saw one before."

"Say that to Dad and he'll make you a present of one," Gigi assured him. "He patented the thing himself and one of his factories turns them out by the thousands. He's sinfully proud of it, too. Designs a new type of 'body' every week or so. The house is full of them."

The ringing of the house telephone interrupted her torrent of words. Snatching up the receiver she cooed "Hello!" and winked at Dundee. "Abbie—on the rampage!" she whispered after a moment. Aloud: "Yes, darling! She's still being 'quizzed.' . . . Oh, me? Why, Tish! How can you? I'm being my most charming self—your dear, little wide-eyed daughter. . . . Of course I'm not giving away family secrets! . . . All right, darling. Keep your shirt on. I think they're almost through."

"She wants you to hurry, because she needs Tish," she explained unnecessarily.

"I'll hurry," Dundee grinned at her. "Now, Mrs. Lambert, will you please tell me when you last saw Doris Matthews?"

"At exactly what time, you mean?" Mrs. Lambert asked. "Let me think. . . . It was about 11, when I came upstairs. I went to my room first and was reading a long letter from one of my New York friends which I had been too busy to open when it came on the late afternoon post, when I suddenly remembered that I had neglected to enter an important engagement for this morning on Mrs. Berkeley's desk calendar. As I was opening my door to go to Mrs. Berkeley's sitting room I saw Doris hurrying past on her way to the backstairs. She looked as if she had been crying."

"Did you stop her—speak to her?" Dundee asked.

"Yes, I called to her. She stopped in my door and I asked her what was wrong. She said, 'Nothing. It's just that I've been talking with Mr. Crosby and remembering.' I saw that she was emotionally upset and did not detain her. She ran on up the backstairs to the servants' quarters and I went to Mrs. Berkeley's sitting room."

"You did!" Dundee exclaimed, startled. "We had no idea—How long were you there, Mrs. Lambert?"

Woman Acquitted for Killing Drunk Husband with Axe

SLO, April 3.—Maren Jensen, 30, a husband and two children. The husband started beating Maren on her wedding day and kept it up with regularity. He played a sort of game with Maren in which he hid children and made her believe he killed them or thrown them in the river. He put their clothes on the back of a stream, and dipped his hands in chicken's blood. One day the husband came home drunk and more abusive than usual. Maren turned out to be the last day ever came home at all. Maren finished him with two strokes of an axe. "I have killed my husband," she told a neighbor. "I would rather spend the rest of my life in prison than in this hell."

Maren was given a trial by jury in the town of Skien. Many witnesses testified that she had done her best to preserve her home. Maren was acquitted, amid great cheering, and a subscription was started for the widow and her children.

Joan Crawford Roughs It for "Montana Moon"

How did you like roughing it in the San Jacinto mountains? was asked of Joan Crawford following completion of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Montana Moon" filmed almost entirely on a cattle ranch.

"It was a great life," the star replied. "For a girl brought up in the city, you don't know how I enjoyed spending several weeks out of doors. I never knew I could get up at six in the morning, wash in cold water, make my own fire, carry in the wood, and like it."

"As for hiking," Joan exclaimed, "After I spent a few weeks scrambling up mountain peaks to get to locations beyond the reach of automobiles, I began to feel like an Alpine climber! The worst part about all this exercise is that it gave me a tremendous appetite. The new Crawford starring vehicle which is now playing at the Saenger theatre was adapted from an original story by Sylvia Thalberg and Frank Butler and was directed by Malcolm St. Clair. The supporting cast contains John Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian, Ricardo Cortez, Cliff Edwards, Karl Dane, Benny Rubin and Lloyd Ingraham.
